

Query ID: test3284

Query Text: where does the microchip go in a dog

Retrieved Documents:

- 0 doc112422 Microchip implant (animal). In April 2012 Northern Ireland became the first part of the United Kingdom to require microchipping of individually licensed dogs.[10] Dog microchipping became mandatory in
- 0 doc112419 Microchip implant (animal). Microchips are not yet universal, but they are legally required in some jurisdictions such as the state of New South Wales, Australia[5] and the United Kingdom (for dogs, s
- 0 doc112421 Microchip implant (animal). In New Zealand, all dogs first registered after 1 July 2006 must be microchipped. Farmers protested that farm dogs should be exempt, drawing a parallel to the Dog Tax War o
- 0 doc112413 Microchip implant (animal). These components are encased in biocompatible soda lime or borosilicate glass and hermetically sealed. Barring rare complications, dogs and cats are unaffected by them.
- 0 doc112429 Microchip implant (animal). RFID chips are used in animal research, and at least three studies conducted since the 1990s have reported tumors at the site of implantation in laboratory mice and rats.[3
- 0 doc112407 Microchip implant (animal). The owner receives a registration certificate with the chip ID and recovery service contact information. The information can also be imprinted on a collar tag worn by the a
- 0 doc112406 Microchip implant (animal). An enrollment form is completed with chip ID, owner contact information, pet name and description, shelter and/or veterinarian contact information, and an alternate emergen
- 0 doc2593964 Dognapping. Historically in the United States, dogs had been stolen and sold on for medical research, but the introduction of the Animal Welfare Act of 1966 reduced these occurrences. The profit avail
- 0 doc112425 Microchip implant (animal). The United States uses the National Animal Identification System for farm and ranch animals other than dogs and cats. In most species except horses, an external eartag is t
- 0 doc112400 Microchip implant (animal). Externally attached microchips such as RFID ear tags are commonly used to identify farm and ranch animals, with the exception of horses. Some external microchips can be rea

Non-retrieved Relevant Documents:

- 1 doc112414 Microchip implant (animal). In dogs and cats, chips are usually inserted below the skin at the back of the neck between the shoulder blades on the dorsal midline. According to one reference, continent