

Query ID: test51

Query Text: who performed the first c section in 1794

Retrieved Documents:

1	doc1420	Jesse Bennett. Dr. Jesse Bennett (July 10, 1769 aJuly 13, 1842) was the first American physician to perform a successful Caesarean section, which he performed on his own wife at the birth of their o
0	doc515885	Caesarean section. The first successful Caesarean section to be performed in America took place in Mason County, Virginia (now Mason County, West Virginia), in 1794. The procedure was performed by Dr.
0	doc1427	Jesse Bennett. Because Dr. Bennett didn't report the operation during his life, it was long believed the first successful American Caesarian section had been performed in 1827 by Dr. John Lambert in O
0	doc515888	Caesarean section. The Roman Lex Regia (royal law), later the Lex Caesarea (imperial law), of Numa Pompilius (715a673 BC),[106] required the child of a mother dead in childbirth to be cut from her w
0	doc515880	Caesarean section. Pliny the Elder theorized that Julius Caesar's name came from an ancestor who was born by caesarean section, but the truth of this is debated (see the discussion of the etymology of
0	doc515883	Caesarean section. Caesarean section usually resulted in the death of the mother. In an account from the 1580s, in Siegershausen, Switzerland, Jakob Nufer a pig gelder, is supposed to have performed t
0	doc515812	Caesarean section. In 2012, about 23 million C-sections were done globally.[8] The international healthcare community has previously considered the rate of 10% and 15% to be ideal for caesarean sectio
0	doc515879	Caesarean section. The Babylonian Talmud, an ancient Jewish religious text, mentions a procedure similar to the caesarean section. The procedure is termed yotzei dofen. It also discusses at length the
0	doc515891	Caesarean section. Finally, the Roman praenomen (given name) Caeso was said to be given to children who were born via C-section. While this was probably just folk etymology made popular by Pliny the E
0	doc515884	Caesarean section. European travelers in the Great Lakes region of Africa during the 19th century observed Caesarean sections being performed on a regular basis.[101] The expectant mother was normally

Non-retrieved Relevant Documents: